Subject: The final destination of EU development funds

In light of recent events in the United States of America, where the new administration, led by Donald Trump, began audits of several public entities, including the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), serious issues regarding the allocation of public funds have been exposed.

In this context, could the Commission clarify the destination and management of EU development funds allocated over the last ten years. Specifically:

1. What projects were funded by the Commission from instruments managed by the Directorate-General for International Cooperation and Development (formerly DG DEVCO, currently DG INTPA), as well as other responsible services? Please specify the recipients, geographic areas, and thematic areas covered, particularly in policies related to gender ideology (sexual rights that are not agreed upon by all Member States), 'woke' culture, support for NGOs that work with illegal immigration (mislabelled as humanitarian aid), the European Pact on Migration and Asylum and initiatives to combat online disinformation.

2. Which European media outlets and think tanks have been funded from official development assistance (ODA) funds, as well as through other European Union financing instruments?
