

Question for written answer E-002126/2025
to the Commission
Rule 144
Gerald Hauser (PfE)

Subject: Largest experiment in human history

On 20 November 2020, Nanette Cocero and Stella Kyriakides signed the advance purchase agreement for the BioNTech/Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine (SANTE/2020/C3/043-SI2.838335) on behalf of Pfizer and the Commission respectively. Pages 48 and 49 state that Member States are to accept that the long-term effects and efficacy of the vaccine are unknown and that unknown side effects may occur. In this legal contract, the Commission thus confirmed that the efficacy and safety of this new mRNA gene-based vaccine were not known. With the conditional authorisation of this completely inadequately tested gene-based vaccine on 21 December 2020, the Commission launched the largest experiment in human history, with 4.6 million doses having been administered worldwide. Vaccinated citizens were never informed of the uncertainties, meaning that the gene-based vaccines were administered without the necessary information and consents and were all in breach of the Nuremberg Code.

1. Did Stella Kyriakides sign this contract independently, without consulting the Commission?
2. Did the entire Commission, including Commission President Ursula von der Leyen, jointly decided to sign the vaccine contract?
3. Why did the Commission not uphold the Treaty and inform citizens – as stated in the contract – that the efficacy and safety of the gene-based vaccine were not guaranteed?
