to the Commission

Rule 144

Pierre Juvet (S&D), Chloé Ridet (S&D), Raphaël Glucksmann (S&D)

Subject: Protecting the European glass fibre industry against dumping

The European glass fibre industry, which is strategically important for key sectors such as construction, transport, defence and aeronautics, is now under threat from Egyptian imports at prices 40 % below our production costs.

These practices are a direct result of Chinese investments made to circumvent existing anti-dumping duties. They are putting at risk 8 000 direct and indirect jobs in Europe, including 800 in France.

An anti-dumping procedure (AD728) has been launched, but the Commission recently expressed reluctance to act. While provisional measures were expected in September, there is a real risk that our industry will disappear, as evidenced by the recent closure of Nippon Electric Glass in the UK.

In the name of European industrial sovereignty and the preservation of essential jobs, in particular in Savoie, the Gard, Belgium, Slovakia and Italy, can the Commission please answer the following questions:

1. What concrete action is it planning to take to ensure fair competition and protect our industry before the findings of its investigation are published in 2026?
2. What specific steps is it intending to take to stop third countries circumventing its anti-dumping measures?
