

Question for written answer E-005051/2025/rev.1
to the Commission
Rule 144
Isabel Serra Sánchez (The Left)

Subject: Eviction of 400 people by Badalona's local government

On 17 December 2025, over 400 migrants were evicted from a building in Badalona following a local government decision, with no alternative accommodation offered to them. Many of these people were forced to move to a makeshift settlement under a motorway bridge, living in extremely harsh conditions, particularly during rainy periods.

UN bodies and social entities have warned that these kinds of forced evictions, without individualised assessments or alternative accommodation, may constitute inhumane or degrading treatment. These events constitute a breach of the Charter of Fundamental Rights, especially the right to dignity, prohibition of degrading treatment and social protection, as well as obligations to receive migrants and asylum seekers. In addition, this also constitutes a form of racial discrimination, which goes against Council Framework Decision 2008/913/JHA, which obliges Member States to penalise racism.

In light of the above:

1. What measures can the Commission take to help ensure that these people will be relocated?
2. In the Commission's view, should the local authority in question be penalised for conduct based on racial hate and discrimination?
3. Is the Commission intending to prohibit these kinds of evictions of vulnerable people in its housing plan?

Submitted: 22.12.2025