Rule 144
Emma Fourreau (The Left)

Subject: Banning Grok, the AI assistant that enables harassment and undressing of women

Since December 2025, men have been using Grok, the AI assistant on X, to manipulate images of young girls and women, generating semi-nude and sexualised images without their consent. This amounts to gender-based and sexual violence, and online harassment, involving both forced sexualisation and public humiliation, as well as a violation of women's dignity and integrity.

AI-generated pornographic and child sexual abuse material increased four-fold in the first quarter of 2025. Despite X stating that it is banning the generation and distribution of such content, the measures that have been taken are evidently insufficient.

Although the Commission recently declared combating online harassment to be an 'absolute priority', this issue raises serious questions about compliance with EU law, in particular the Digital Services Act, and the EU's ability to effectively address gender-based violence.

How is the Commission planning to:

1. ban the functionality allowing users to generate semi-nude images of young girls and women and punish the platform X and Grok?
2. identify and hold accountable the users of these manipulated images?
3. explicitly integrate the fight against gender-based and sexual violence into the EU's future plan to tackle online harassment?
