Question for written answer E-004299/2026
to the Commission
Rule 144
Fabio De Masi (NI)

Subject: Assessment of Russia's immediate military threat

On 30 September 2026, NATO Secretary-General Mark Rutte stated that there was currently no immediate military threat to NATO territory from Russia[1]. He also stressed that NATO was prepared for possible threats and that it had the necessary capabilities to defend its territory.

Does the Commission share the NATO Secretary-General's assessment that there is currently no immediate military threat to NATO territory from Russia?

Submitted: 20.10.2026

1 https://www.euronews.com/2026/09/30/there-is-no-immediate-threat-to-nato-territory-natos-rutte-tells-euronews .