Amendment

6. Stresses that the fight against discrimination must not be diverted to prevent any criticism of political Islam or to confer institutional legitimacy on organised Islamist networks; endorses the analysis of several researchers and experts, including anthropologist Florence Bergeaud-Blackler, President of the Centre for Research on the Muslim Brotherhood, who argue that the fight against Islamophobia is instrumentalised by Islamists to advance their demands, impose an offence of blasphemy and prevent criticism of fundamentalist Islam; stresses that criticism of religions is an essential component of freedom of expression and democratic pluralism;

Amendment

6a. Believes that the practice of concealing the face in public spaces and premises open to the public poses an unacceptable challenge to public security, identification and effective law enforcement; supports, therefore, all national measures aimed at prohibiting full-face coverings (niqab or burqa) in public spaces and premises open to the public as a necessary step to ensure social cohesion, public safety and the protection of the rights and freedoms of others, in particular women;
