43a. Stresses that the outsourcing of cleaning, catering, childcare, travel agency and IT services services exposes the staff concerned, who are predominantly women, to often more precarious employment conditions, a deterioration in their working conditions and less favourable social protection; recalls that Parliament must set an example in terms of workers' rights and job quality; accordingly calls for the in-house provision of those services, including the staff responsible for them, to be reinstated as soon as possible, with full respect for workers' rights, fair remuneration, guarantees ensuring continuity of employment and compliance with the highest social and labour standards;

43b. Stresses that Parliament's drivers perform an essential role in the functioning of the institution and in transporting Members and other authorised persons; notes that their working conditions, their knowledge of security requirements and their potential access to confidential information concerning the institution's movements and activities require specific safeguards; considers that outsourcing these functions could undermine service continuity, the ability to ensure compliance with security requirements and the confidentiality inherent in these duties; accordingly calls for Parliament's driver services to remain in-house and opposes any outsourcing of these functions;

43c. Calls for Parliament's public procurement contracts to include stringent social criteria, particularly regarding remuneration, job security, occupational health and safety, and compliance with applicable collective agreements, and for their implementation to be subject to effective monitoring; calls for any decision to outsource services or renew a service contract to be preceded by a transparent assessment of the total cost, including the costs of monitoring, contract management and staff turnover, as well as the impact on working conditions, service quality and continuity of operations; calls for that assessment to be communicated to Parliament's competent bodies before any decision to outsource is taken;

Paragraph 43 d (new)

Motion for a resolution

Amendment

43d. Calls on Parliament to ensure, across all its outsourced service contracts, that changes of contractor do not result in a deterioration of employment conditions, unjustified loss of seniority or disruption to the professional continuity of the workers concerned; calls for tender documents to provide for effective social safeguards and for compliance with those safeguards to be monitored throughout the duration of the contract.
